Bennington Review

THE BENNINGTON REVIEW began publication in April 1978. A testing ground for contemporary arts and letters, it appears each year in April, September and December. It is a lavishly illustrated magazine, with handsome color reproductions and full-page photographs of writers and artists. At 8½ x 11, it is much larger than other "little magazines," and publishes—in addition to poetry, fiction and articles—regular columns by a permanent staff appearing in each issue. They are:

Richard Schechner
theatre

Howard Nemerov
books

Malcolm Bradbury
new fiction

Marshall Berman
culture watch

Leslie Epstein
film

Ronald Paulson
art

Nancy Goldner
dance

Charles Molesworth
photography

Barry Targan
crafts

Robert Boyers
arguments
